9. Profile of the programme
The Bachelor of Law provides progressive study of public and private law, constitutional and administrative law, criminal and civil law, international law, human rights, commercial and personal-status law, legal procedures, and legal research. The programme is designed to develop legal analysis, research, legal communication, ethical and socially responsible practice, and professional readiness. Digital legal competencies, teamwork, and practical assessment have been identified for further development.
10. Programme Educational Objectives
1. Equip law graduates with comprehensive knowledge of legal disciplines in both public and private law divisions, preparing them to understand and practice law effectively.
2. Develop graduates' skills in analysis, critical thinking, legal reasoning, and research to cultivate a sound legal aptitude.
3. Provide graduates with scientific legal skills to apply them practically through field training, enhancing their readiness to work in professional legal environments.

4. Consolidate ethical values, a sense of responsibility, principles of justice, and the defense of rights.
5. Enable graduates to leverage their legal understanding to pursue continuous learning, keep pace with the evolution of legal systems, and contribute actively to legal reforms and societal problem-solving through interdisciplinary perspectives.

11. Programme learning outcomes

1. Apply legal principles across diverse legal branches and specializations to contribute to analysis and the adoption of arguments regarding legal cases.
2. Communicate legal knowledge effectively in a manner appropriate for all institutions and diverse community segments.
3. Maximize the effective use of legal research to contribute to resolving cases and developing legal systems.
4. Utilize legal aptitude in legal analysis and case studies, interpreting them in light of legal reasoning to solve problems with high efficiency.
5. Employ appropriate legal software, databases, and digital tools to support legal research for resolving cases.
6. Adhere to ethical values, principles of justice, and professional responsibility in legal practice and decision-making.
7. Collaborate effectively within interdisciplinary teams, manage legal projects, and demonstrate leadership skills in legal and community environments.
